Abstract : Handwriting is a distinctive way of writing using a pen or pencil, reflecting an individual's unique style. It encompasses both block and cursive styles, differentiating itself from generic script, calligraphy, or typeface.

The uniqueness of each person's handwriting makes it a valuable tool for verifying the writer of a document.

INTRODUCTION & NEED OF THE STUDY.

Writing with a pen or a pencil be it our curriculum or just to practice for good handwriting as to develop a good penmanship.

We start loving our writings just if our handwriting looks good so why not make it even better by following certain rules for some time until we feel confident enough to rule our own life with such great penmanship.

On ruled and unruled.

This practice is really simple when you see ruled lines. Start writing in between the given ruled lines as if our whole word or even an alphabet should not touch the bottom line of the ruled line and instead we are now writing in the middle of the ruled line.

You may slant for speed or comfort or write straight too but always in the middle of the ruled line. The capital or certain small alphabets from some words may lead to touching the top line or and also the bottom line too.

But do make a habit of writing in the middle of the ruled lines, sooner you won't need a background support to write on unruled sheets either and with one of the best handwriting.

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

Writing in the middle of the rules can bring about immense changes with each individual's handwriting.
